EmpowerMates are made up of 10th-, 11th-, and 12th-grade local high school students with strong academic backgrounds and a reputation for emotional maturity. Many are honor students, and all of them are driven to use their talents to help others. EmpowerMates are matched up with students at the elementary, middle school, and high school levels that need a little more attention and guidance to reach their full potential. These students understand the work and know how to make it more accessible to others. When a child isn’t doing well in a subject, it’s fair to assume that they aren’t enjoying it. It doesn’t make a lot of sense to force them to focus on that subject for an hour and a half with a complete stranger. This makes tutoring feel more like a punishment than a way to help.
